Dorothy Arzner

Film Director
1897-1979

One of only two women working as directors in Hollywood from the late 1920s through to the early 1940s, Dorothy Arzner holds the record for the most films directed by a woman and was the first woman to join the Directors Guild of America.

She shared a forty-year public relationship with dancer and choreographer Marion Morgan, who created dance sequences for several of Arzner's films.

Arzner also launched the careers of several major stars including Katharine Hepburn, Rosalind Russell, and Lucille Ball.

Her films are celebrated for their portrayals of women's relationships, often challenging traditional gender roles and critiquing society's expectations of femininity.

Though long recognised by scholars, Arzner's legacy has faded from the mainstream. We hope to change that by bringing her story back to life by naming London's only queer cinema after this pioneering legend.

Welcome to The Arzner.
